

Copyright Facts

Photographs, other artwork, and text, in the photokaboom.com blog, not by Jim Beecher, are reproduced for non-commercial and educational purposes in accordance with the fair use provision of U.S. Code Title 17, Section 107.

If you want to use these copyrighted items, you must obtain permission from the copyright owners.

If you're not familiar with fair use, go to U.S. Copyright Office - Fair Use, Understanding Fair Use (Carolyn E. Wright), Fair Use Network, and Wikipedia - Fair Use.

You may have to consider whether a usage is fair use before sending a takedown notice. Go to Judge Copyright Owners Must Consider 'Fair Use' Before Sending Takedown Notice Threat Level.

Painting With Light, Artists Make Images That Glow

By Jim Beecher on January 23, 2009 6:00 AM | Permalink

Michelle McSwain & Ryan Warnberg

Also go to Painting with Light & Night Photography.

Jim

Painting With Light, Artists Make Images That Glow

Watch artists Michelle McSwain and Ryan Warnberg, collectively known as MRI, demonstrate how to paint with light.

Vision expert Stephen Macknik, of the Barrow Neurological Institute, explains what the images teach us about the human visual system.

NPR

Categories: Photography